PLENARY SESSION

The EU in the Aftermath of the Crisis: Raising Questions about Welfare Problems and Solutions

David Natali, S. Anna School of Advanced Studies of Pisa and European Social Observatory of Brussels

Moderator: Paula Campos Pinto

The presentation aims at shedding light on the way the European Union (EU) has addressed the 2008 economic and financial crisis through a rapid summary of the main reforms passed on the EU socio-economic governance (from the Fiscal Compact, to the European Semester; and from the ECB Quantitative Easing to the European Pillar of Social Rights) and its impact on member states' political economies and welfare policies.

The presentation looks at two questions: What has the EU done to react to the economic and financial crisis? What has shaped the EU socio-economic reforms? To answer them we stand on the shoulders of Hugh Heclo. For the latter politics is not just about powering (orchestrating political consensus). It is also about puzzling: wondering what to do and raising questions about problems and their solution.

We thus frame the EU response to the crisis in terms of a form of 'bounded puzzling'. Since the emergence of the Great Recession, the changing EU socio-economic governance has been shaped by three main factors: institutions, interests and ideas. EU socio-economic governance has proved flexible enough to change and provide some solution to the challenges originated by the Great Recession, but reforms have been consistent with a 'muddling through' process that leaves some EU existential problems still unanswered.

*David Natali is Professor of Comparative and EU Politics at the S. Anna School of Advanced Studies of Pisa, and associate researcher at the European Social Observatory of Brussels. He holds a doctorate in political science at the European University Institute in Florence. He has been involved in several integrated European projects and networks of excellence. His research is mainly centred on a comparative analysis of social policy reforms, EU integration, industrial relations and the politics of welfare. He teaches on the doctorate programme of the Scuola Normale Superiore (SNS) – Institute of Humanities and Social Sciences in Florence. His most recent publications include: D. Natali (eds.) The New Pension Mix in Europe, Brussels, PIE-Peter Lang, 2017; B. Vanhercke, D. Bouget and D. Natali (eds.), Social Policy in the European Union. State of Play 2016, Brussels, ETUI/OSE, 2016; and A. Agostini, V. Lisi, D. Natali and S. Sabato, Balancing Protection and Investment: Structural reforms in five countries, Brussels, ETUI, 2016.*

PLENARY PANEL

Global Pathways of Welfare State Developments

Daniel Béland, University of Saskatchewan

Diego Sánchez-Ancochea, University of Oxford

Mogens K. Justesen, Copenhagen Business School

Moderator: Isabel Soares

Daniel Béland

This panel presentation offers a critical discussion of recent social policy trends in Canada and the United States, with an emphasis on areas such as family benefits, health care, and old-age pensions. The focus for each country is on the federal level but significant variations do exist among U.S. states and Canadian provinces. I show how, since 2008, social policy austerity has proved quite limited in the United States and Canada, two countries that have witnessed attempts to expand, rather than shrink, social protection. Yet, the 2016 election of Donald Trump to the Presidency has changed the political dynamic in the United States. As for Canada, the Trudeau government continues to expand social policy rather than retrench it amidst enduring federal deficits. I conclude with a brief discussion of two recent episodes: the Republican attempt to repeal Obamacare and the federal-provincial agreement on the expansion of the Canada Pension Plan.

*Daniel Béland holds the Canada Research Chair in Public Policy (Tier 1) at the Johnson-Shoyama Graduate School of Public Policy. A specialist of social policy, he has published 15 books and 115 articles in peer-reviewed journals. Recent books include Advanced Introduction to Social Policy (Edward Elgar, 2016; with Rianne Mahon), and Obamacare Wars: Federalism, State Politics, and the Affordable Care Act (University Press of Kansas, 2016; with Philip Rocco and Alex Waddan), and Fiscal Federalism and Equalization Policy in Canada: Political and Economic Dimensions (University of Toronto Press, 2017; with André Lecours, Gregory P. Marchildon, Haizhen Mou, and Rose Olfert).*

Social Policy in Latin America: Going Against the Current?

Diego Sánchez-Ancochea (in collaboration with Juliana Martínez Franzoni)

In contrast to the experience in most of Europe, Latin America's social policy was traditionally characterised by high levels of segmentation with sharp differences in access and generosity between different income groups. Yet in recent years social spending and coverage increased rapidly—at a time when Europe was witnessing austerity and spending cuts. Did the recent expansion contribute to a reduction in segmentation? Are we witnessing the consolidation of a more generous and equitable social policy? Focusing on three policy outcomes (access, generosity and equity) and considering the period 2003-2013, this presentation explores this question. It shows how the expansion of coverage in Latin America has gone hand in hand with ongoing concerns about the generosity of transfers, the quality of services and the gaps between different social groups. We also identify country differences within a region with several welfare paths and evaluate future scenarios.

*Diego Sánchez-Ancochea is Director of the Latin American Centre and Governing Body Fellow of St Antony's. His research concentrates on income inequality, structural transformation, development models and the political economy of development in Latin America. Together with Juliana Martínez Franzoni, he is the author of The Quest for Universal Social Policy in the South. Actors, Ideas and Architectures (CUP, 2016) and Good Jobs and Social Services: How Costa Rica Achieved the Elusive Double Incorporation (Palgrave MacMillan, 2013). Diego Sánchez-Ancochea is also the co-editor of the Journal of Latin American Studies and upcoming Treasurer of the Latin American Studies Association.*

Mogens K. Justesen

This talk will consider the links between democracy, inequality, and redistribution in developing countries, focusing in particular in developments in one of Africa's key emerging economies – South Africa. In contrast to widely held expectations based on models of redistribution in political economy, inequality has increased considerably since the introduction of post-apartheid democracy in South Africa in 1994. Based on data from this case, the talk will address potential explanations for why democracy does not always translate into more redistribution and lower levels of inequality.

Mogens K. Justesen is an associate professor at the Department of Business and Politics, Copenhagen Business School. His main research interests revolve around democracy, poverty, and economic development in development countries. Justesen's work spans from country-level analysis of political institutions and economic growth to individual-level analysis of survey data on poverty and (electoral) corruption. He is currently leading a research project on poverty, electoral clientelism, and vote buying in new democracies, with a particular focus on South Africa. Justesen's research has been published in a number of international outlets, including Comparative Politics, Electoral Studies, Political Research Quarterly, European Journal of Political Research, and the World Bank Economic Review.

PLENARY SESSION

Why Don't We Have a New Welfare State? Growth Strategies and Welfare State Reforms in Europe

Bruno Palier, CNRS researcher at Sciences Po Paris
Moderator: Analia Torres

In 2002, G Esping-Andersen edited a book entitled "why we need a new welfare state", that contributed to design a new architecture for the welfare state, based on the ideas of social investment. Fifteen years later, one cannot really see the emergence of such social investment welfare state in the various parts of Europe. On the contrary, since the crisis, many countries seem to have gone into other directions. Why is it the case? One can think of course of path dependency, economic and political difficulties. But what matters is also the type of growth strategy chosen at both the national and the European level. Analysing growth strategies is key to better understand welfare state reforms. Many of these strategies in Europe are not matching with a social investment perspective.

Bruno Palier is CNRS Research Director at Sciences Po, Centre d'études européennes. Trained in social science, he has a PHD in Political science, and is a former student of Ecole Normale Supérieure. He is studying welfare reforms in Europe. He is co-director of LIEPP (Laboratory for Interdisciplinary Evaluation of Public Policies). He has published numerous articles on welfare reforms in France and in Europe in Global Social Policy, Governance, Journal of European Social Policy, New Political Economy, Politics and Society, Socio-Economic Review, West European Politics, Social Policy and administration, Social Politics, and various books. In 2012, he co-edited The Age of Dualization: The Changing Face of Inequality in Deindustrializing Societies. (with Emmenegger, Patrick, Hausermann, Silja, and Seeleib-Kaiser, Martin), Oxford University Press, and Towards a social investment welfare state? Ideas, Policies and Challenges, (with Morel, Nathalie and Palme, Joakim), Bristol: Policy Press. In 2010, he edited A long Good Bye to Bismarck? The Politics of Welfare Reforms in Continental Europe, Amsterdam university Press, in 2007, he co-edited a special issue of Social Policy and Administration, on "Comparing welfare reforms in Continental Europe", in 2006, Changing France, Co-edited with Pepper Culpepper et Peter Hall, Palgrave; 2010, La réforme des systèmes de santé, Paris, PUF, Collection Que sais-je? (5th edition); 2010, La réforme des retraites, Paris PUF, Collection Que sais-je? (3rd edition); 2002, Gouverner la Sécurité sociale, Paris, PUF, coll. le lien social (second updated edition in 2005); 2001, Globalization and European Welfare states: challenges and changes, co-edited with Rob S. Sykes and Pauline Prior, London: Palgrave.
